📍 New York

Sabri Siraj is an antitrust and complex litigation attorney who focuses his practice on representing companies and individuals in high-stakes disputes, government investigations, and regulatory matters. He worked with the Kraft Group and the New England Patriots — experience that shapes how he thinks about competition, risk, and strategy in competitive and regulated environments. After graduating from Harvard Law, he went on to train at Davis Polk & Wardwell LLP before joining Bona Law's antitrust practice.

Sabri represents clients in antitrust matters, class action and multi-district litigation, business-to-business disputes, white-collar defense, and governmental and internal investigations. He has represented companies and individuals before the SEC, DOJ, and FTC, helping clients navigate matters where outcomes turn on judgment, credibility, and advocacy.

While in law school, Sabri co-founded Pembe, a nonprofit organization dedicated to mentoring aspiring law students through the admissions process and expanding access to legal careers.
